Bacon is a British passion! People in the UK eat a lot of it. They often have bacon and eggs for breakfast, and a bacon sandwich is a breakfast treat<sup>2</sup>. How do you make a bacon sandwich? It's easy! Just cut some bread, add some butter, a lot of hot bacon and a little ketchup. It's delicious!

Roast dinners

A lot of families eat a roast dinner for lunch on Sundays. They call it a Sunday roast. The tradition dates back to medieval times, when rich people gave their servants beer and roast meat after church on Sundays. Today a typical roast dinner consists of roast meat – usually beef, chicken, lamb or pork – roast potatoes and vegetables, for example peas, carrots or broccoli. It's also a tradition to have Yorkshire pudding with a roast dinner, particularly with roast beef. Yorkshire pudding isn't sweet. You make it with milk, eggs and flour <sup>3</sup>. In the past people ate it as a substitute for meat.
